教育方法等
概要	This course focuses on career path guidance for the students of the 4th graders in the department of International Business. Students are expected to envision their own appropriate future career path by employing the relevant expertise, knowledge and skills that have been learnt thus far and by reflecting on their unique personalities. The other focus for the latter half of the course is on starting thesis research activities. Students are introduced to professors' research background to determine their research area and topics of interests.
授業の進め方・方法	The contents and activities vary from lectures on finding future career by teachers of diverse career backgrounds to inviting real people from nearby companies. The latter half of the course is spent on starting to think about thesis research activities by circulating profesors' offices and discussing their research backgrounds
注意点	This is a required course, with constant presence being the key to a sucessful completion. Studnets are required to submit occasional reports.
